

American Authors
Copywork
Washington Irving

Copyright © 2014 by Bonnie Rose Hudson

Please note, the spelling of some words has been modernized for use in teaching spelling.

All Rights Reserved. This book may not be reproduced or transmitted by any means, including graphic, electronic, or mechanical, without the express written consent of the author except in the case of brief quotations embodied in critical articles and reviews and those uses expressly described in the following Terms of Use. You are welcome to link back to the author's website, <http://writebonnierose.com>, but may not link directly to the PDF file. You may not alter this work, sell or distribute it in any way, host this file on your own website, or upload it to a shared website.

Terms of Use: For use by a family, this unit can be printed and copied as many times as needed. Classroom teachers may reproduce one copy for each student in his or her class. Members of co-ops or workshops may reproduce one copy for up to fifteen children. This material cannot be resold or used in any way for commercial purposes. Please contact the publisher with any questions.

Rip Van Winkle (Excerpt)
By Washington Irving

Whoever has made a voyage up the Hudson must remember the Catskill mountains. They are a dismembered branch of the great Appalachian family, and are seen away to the west of the river, swelling up to a noble height, and lording it over the surrounding country. Every change of season, every change of weather, indeed, every hour of the day, produces some

A decorative border with intricate floral and scrollwork patterns surrounds the text. It features a central horizontal line with a diamond-shaped ornament and vertical lines with diamond-shaped ornaments at the corners and midpoints.

change in the magical hues and shapes of these mountains, and they are regarded by all the good wives, far and near, as perfect barometers. When the weather is fair and settled, they are clothed in blue and purple, and print their bold outlines on the clear evening sky, but, sometimes, when the rest of the landscape is cloudless, they will gather a hood of gray vapors about their summits, which, in the last rays of the setting sun, will glow and light up like a crown of glory.

At the foot of these fairy mountains, the voyager may have descried the light smoke curling up from a village, whose shingle-roofs gleam among the trees, just where the blue tints of the upland melt away into the fresh green of the nearer landscape. It is a little village of great antiquity, having been founded by some of the Dutch colonists, in the early times of the province, just about the beginning of the government of the good Peter Stuyvesant, (may he rest in peace) and there were some of the houses of the original settlers standing within a few years, built of small yellow bricks brought from Holland, having latticed windows and gable fronts, surmounted with weather-cocks.

A decorative floral border with intricate scrollwork and leaf patterns, featuring diamond-shaped accents at the top and bottom center.

Rip Van Winkle (Excerpt)

By Washington Irving

Whoever has made a voyage up the Hudson must remember the Catskill mountains. They are a dismembered branch of the great Appalachian family, and are seen away to the west of the river, swelling up to a noble height, and lording it over the surrounding country. Every change of season, every change of weather, indeed, every hour of the day, produces some

A decorative border with intricate floral and scrollwork patterns in a light gray color, framing the text on all four sides.

change in the magical hues
and shapes of these
mountains, and they are
regarded by all the good
wives, far and near, as
perfect barometers. When
the weather is fair and
settled, they are clothed in
blue and purple, and print
their bold outlines on the
clear evening sky, but,
sometimes, when the rest of
the landscape is cloudless,
they will gather a hood of
gray vapors about their
summits, which, in the last
rays of the setting sun, will

A decorative border with intricate floral and scrollwork patterns surrounds the text. It features a central horizontal line with a diamond-shaped ornament in the middle, and similar motifs at the corners and along the sides.

glow and light up like a crown
of glory.

At the foot of these fairy
mountains, the voyager may
have descried the light smoke
curling up from a village,
whose shingle-roofs gleam
among the trees, just where
the blue tints of the upland
melt away into the fresh
green of the nearer
landscape. It is a little village
of great antiquity, having
been founded by some of
the Dutch colonists, in the
early times of the province,

just about the beginning of the government of the good Peter Stuyvesant, (may he rest in peace!) and there were some of the houses of the original settlers standing within a few years, built of small yellow bricks brought from Holland, having latticed windows and gable fronts, surmounted with weather-cocks.

Rip Van Winkle (Excerpt)

By Washington Irving

Whoever has made a voyage up the Hudson must remember the Catskill mountains. They are a dismembered branch of the great Appalachian family, and are seen away to the west of the river, swelling up to a noble height, and lording it over the surrounding country. Every change of season, every change of weather, indeed, every hour of the day, produces some change in the magical hues and shapes of these mountains, and they are regarded by all the good wives, far and near, as perfect barometers. When the weather is fair and settled, they are clothed in blue and purple, and print their bold outlines on the clear evening sky, but, sometimes, when the rest of the landscape is cloudless, they will gather a hood of gray vapors about their summits, which, in the last rays of the setting sun, will

glow and light up like a crown
of glory.

At the foot of these fairy
mountains, the voyager may
have descried the light smoke curling up from a village, whose shingle-roofs gleam among the trees, just where the blue tints of the upland melt away into the fresh green of the nearer
landscape. It is a little village of great antiquity, having been founded by some of the Dutch colonists, in the early times of the province, just about the beginning of the government of the good Peter Stuyvesant, (may he rest in peace!) and there were some of the houses of the original settlers standing within a few years, built of small yellow bricks brought from Holland, having latticed windows and gable fronts, surmounted with weather-cocks.

Rip Van Winkle (Excerpt)

By Washington Irving

Whoever has made a voyage up the Hudson must remember the Catskill mountains. They are a dismembered branch of the great Appalachian family, and are seen away to the west of the river, swelling up to a noble height, and lording it over the surrounding country. Every change of season, every change of weather, indeed, every hour of the day, produces some change

A decorative border with intricate floral and scrollwork patterns, featuring diamond-shaped accents at the top and bottom center, framing the text.

in the magical hues and shapes of these mountains, and they are regarded by all the good wives, far and near, as perfect barometers. When the weather is fair and settled, they are clothed in blue and purple, and print their bold outlines on the clear evening sky, but, sometimes, when the rest of the landscape is cloudless, they will gather a hood of gray vapors about their
summits, which, in the last
rays of the setting sun, will

glow and light up like a crown
of glory.

At the foot of these fairy
mountains, the voyager may
have descried the light smoke
curling up from a village, whose
shingle-roofs gleam among the
trees, just where the blue tints
of the upland melt away into
the fresh green of the nearer
landscape. It is a little village
of great antiquity, having been
founded by some of the Dutch

colonists, in the early times of the province, just about the beginning of the government of the good Peter Stuyvesant, (may he rest in peace!) and there were some of the houses of the original settlers standing within a few years, built of small yellow bricks brought from Holland, having latticed windows and gable fronts, surmounted with weather-cocks.

Handwriting practice lines consisting of multiple sets of three horizontal lines (top solid, middle dashed, bottom solid) for letter formation.

Handwriting practice lines consisting of multiple sets of three horizontal lines (top solid, middle dashed, bottom solid) for letter formation.

A decorative floral border with intricate scrollwork and leaf patterns, featuring diamond-shaped accents at the top and bottom center.

Rip Van Winkle (Excerpt)

By Washington Irving

*Whoever has made a voyage
up the Hudson must remember the Catskill mountains. They are a dismembered branch of the great Appalachian family, and are seen away to the west of the river, swelling up to a noble height, and larding it over the surrounding country.
Every change of season, every change of weather, indeed, every hour of the day, produces*

some change in the magical hues and shapes of these
mountains, and they are
regarded by all the good wives, far and near, as perfect barometers. When the weather is fair and settled, they are clothed in blue and purple, and print their bold outlines on the clear evening sky, but,
sometimes, when the rest of
the landscape is cloudless,
they will gather a hood of
gray vapors about their summits, which, in the last rays of the setting sun, will glow and light up like a crown of glory.

*At the foot of these fairy
mountains, the voyager may
have descried the light smoke
curling up from a village,
whose shingle-roofs gleam
among the trees, just where
the blue tints of the upland melt away into the fresh green of the nearer landscape. It is a little village of great antiquity, having been*

founded by some of the Dutch colonists, in the early times of the province, just about the beginning of the government of the good Peter Stuyvesant, (may he rest in peace!) and there were some of the houses of the original settlers standing within a few years, built of small yellow bricks brought from Holland, having latticed windows and gable fronts, surmounted with weather-cocks.

A decorative floral border with intricate scrollwork and leaf patterns, framing the text on all sides.

Rip Van Winkle (Excerpt)

By Washington Irving

*Whoever has made a voyage
up the Hudson must remember
the Catskill mountains. They
are a dismembered branch of
the great Appalachian family,
and are seen away to the west
of the river, swelling up to a noble height, and lording it over the surrounding country.
Every change of season, every
change of weather, indeed,
every hour of the day, produces*

A decorative border with intricate floral and scrollwork patterns, featuring diamond-shaped accents at the top and bottom center.

some change in the magical
hues and shapes of these
mountains, and they are
regarded by all the good wives,
far and near, as perfect
barometers. When the weather
is fair and settled, they are
clothed in blue and purple,
and print their bold outlines
on the clear evening sky, but,
sometimes, when the rest of
the landscape is cloudless,
they will gather a hood of
gray vapors about their
summits, which, in the

A decorative border with intricate floral and scrollwork patterns surrounds the text. It features a central horizontal line with a diamond-shaped ornament in the middle, and similar vertical elements on the left and right sides.

*last rays of the setting sun,
will glow and light up like a
crown of glory.*

*At the foot of these fairy
mountains, the voyager may
have descried the light smoke
curling up from a village,
whose shingle-roofs gleam
among the trees, just where
the blue tints of the upland
melt away into the fresh green
of the nearer landscape. It is
a little village of great
antiquity, having been*

founded by some of the Dutch colonists, in the early times of the province, just about the beginning of the government of the good Peter Stuyvesant, (may he rest in peace!) and there were some of the houses of the original settlers standing within a few years, built of small yellow bricks brought from Holland, having latticed windows and gable fronts, surmounted with weather-cocks.

Handwriting practice lines consisting of multiple sets of three horizontal lines (top solid, middle dashed, bottom solid) for letter formation.

Handwriting practice lines consisting of multiple sets of three horizontal lines (top solid, middle dashed, bottom solid) for letter formation.

Thank you for downloading my product! I pray it is a blessing to you and your family. If you'd like to view more of my products and freebies, you'll find them at WriteBonnieRose.com. I am adding new material almost every week, so please check back often or sign up to receive my newsletter so you don't miss a thing.

At WriteBonnieRose.com, you'll find:

- Resources for Teaching Kids About the Persecuted Church and Unreached People Groups
- Copywork
- History Resources and Printables
- Holiday Resources and Printables
- Coloring Pages
- Notebooking Pages
- Timeline Worksheets and Resources
- Short Stories for Kids
- Writing Opportunities
- How to Write for Homeschoolers

I'd love to connect with you! In addition to my website, you can find me on:

CurrClick
Teachers Pay Teachers Facebook
Pinterest
Twitter
Google+
LinkedIn
Faith Writers
Exploring with Jake Looking Out the 10/40 Window

