Global Geography Trivia Game

Are you ready to test your geography knowledge? What do you know about landforms, oceans, continents, countries, and more? Here is your chance to prove your knowledge.

Preparing the Game:

1. Attach two file folders together by overlapping one side so you have three parts to glue the game board to. Attach the game board to the three parts of the file folders, matching the spaces on the board, trimming the pages if necessary to make them meet in the correct places.
2. Cut out the question cards. If they are printed on cardstock or printed on paper and laminated, they will hold up longer, but they can be used just as easily if printed on regular copy paper. One set of the question cards are special "Go to" cards and have "Go to ..." on the bottom. The other question cards have the names of continents written on the bottom. Separate the cards into groups so that all of the "Europe" cards are together, all of the "Asia" cards are together, all of the "Go to" cards are together, and so on, making a total of seven piles. Blank cards for each continent have been provided so that families can add their own questions from their studies if desired.
3. Cut out the cards with pictures of the continents and place them beside the game board. You will have a total of six of these piles. (There are seven continents, but since there are fewer questions to ask about Antarctica, it is included with Australia and Oceania.)
4. Use one die and something such as beans or tokens from another game as markers.

Object of the Game:

1. To land on the special continent spaces outlined in red, answer the question correctly that you are asked there, and collect a continent card. Repeat until you have collected one of each of the continent cards.

Playing the Game:

1. Shuffle each of the six groups of regular question cards and put them on their corresponding spaces around the large space that forms the center of the board. Shuffle the "Go to" cards and place them anywhere in the large center space.
2. Each player places a marker in the large center space. It does not matter where in that space players start. Take turns rolling the die to see who is first, and the player who rolls the highest number goes first.
3. The player to the left of the player who is first draws a "Go to" card and asks the first player a question. If the player answers the question correctly, he rolls the dice, moves the number rolled, and his turn ends. Please note: the player must move toward the continent outlined in red as directed on the "Go to" card. The player does not have to land on the special continent space on his first turn, and if the player rolls a number that is higher than the number of spaces needed to land on the special continent space, he simply chooses a direction to either side of it and continues moving. If the question is answered incorrectly, the player does not move and must answer a second "Go to" question correctly on his next turn to move.
4. Play passes to the left, and the second player is asked a "Go to" question (which is drawn by the player to his or her left) from the stack. If answered correctly, the player rolls the dice and moves toward the special continent space as directed.

Global Geography Trivia Game

5. Play continues in this way until everyone has had their first turn.

6. When it is the first player's turn again, the player to his or her left must draw a card from the stack for the continent the first player is on. For example, if the first player landed on a North America space after his or her previous move, the question must come from the stack of North America question cards. NOTE: If the space is a special continent space outlined in red, skip to #7.

If the player answers the question correctly, he or she can roll the dice and move. After leaving the spoke that takes players from the center section of the board, players can move forward, backward, or both on a turn. For example, if a player rolls a three, he can move forward two and backward one if it helps him get closer to the space he wants to land on. If a player is on one of the spokes, he can only move forward. After reaching the outer section of the board, a player can move around the outside of the board or take a shortcut through the center to reach the continent he wants to land on. If he happens to land on the center section, he must answer a question from the center section card stack and go toward the continent as directed. Since this can help or hurt a player, he must decide whether to take that chance on the shortcut. If at any point a player answers a question incorrectly, he must stay where he is and answer a new question from that continent on his next turn.

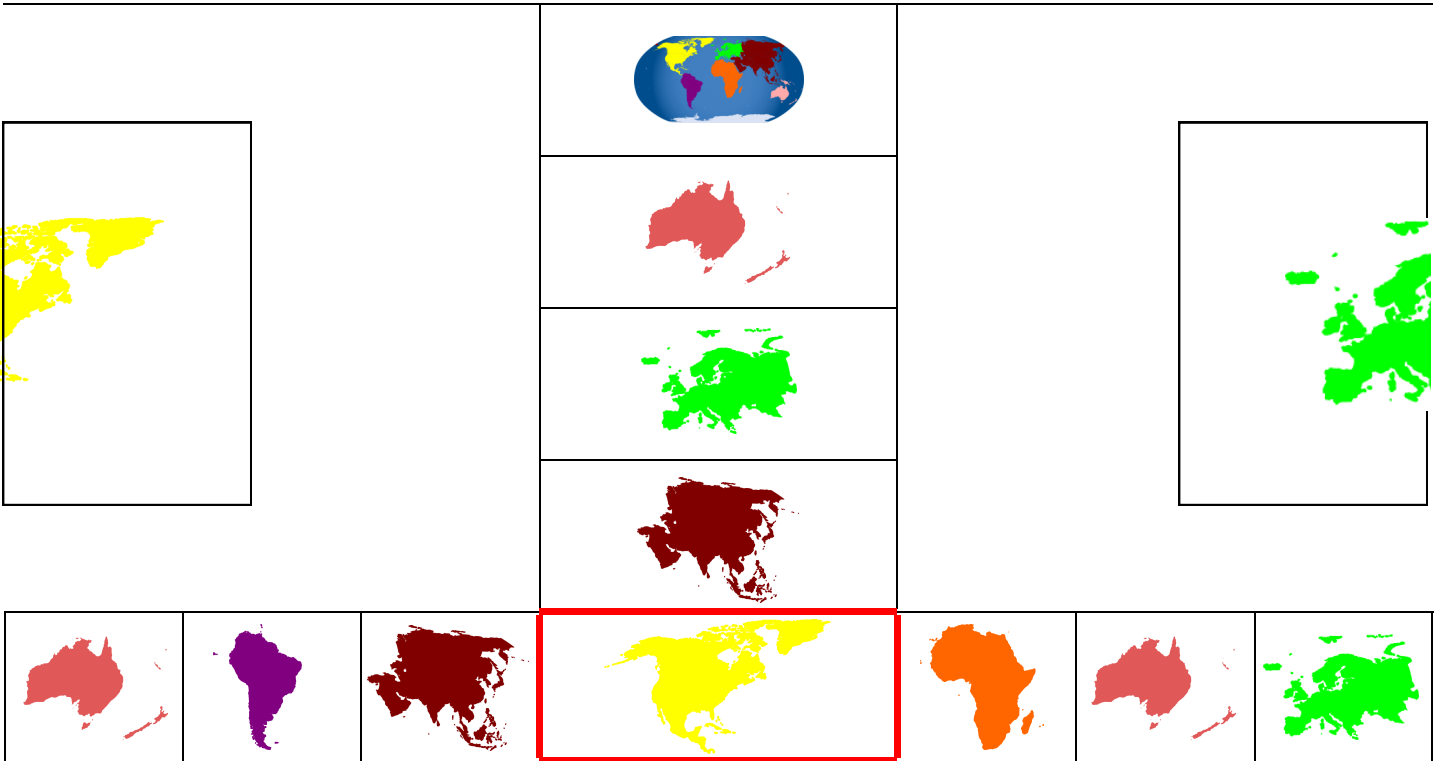

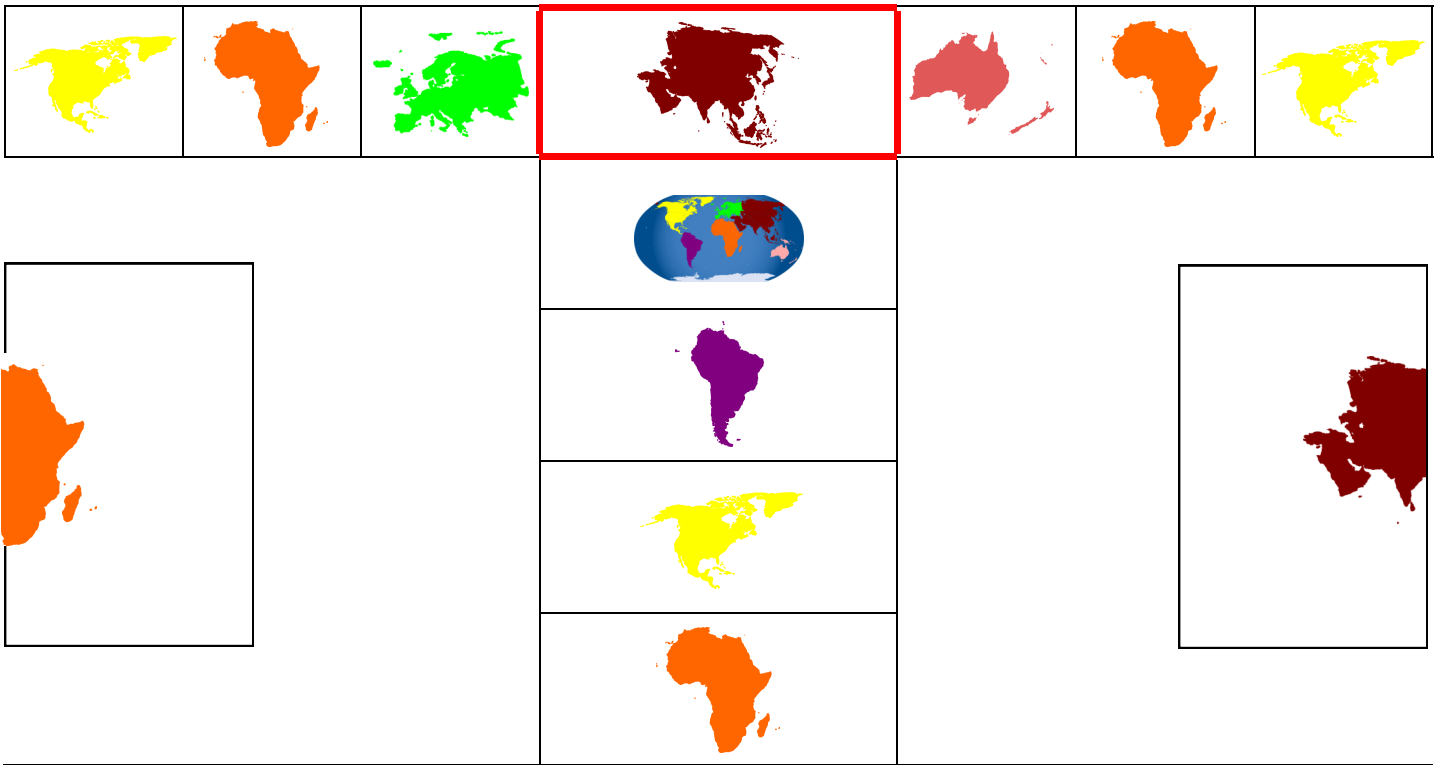

Please note: Scattered throughout the board are spaces with a world map on them. If a player lands on this space, he can choose which continent he wants a question from.

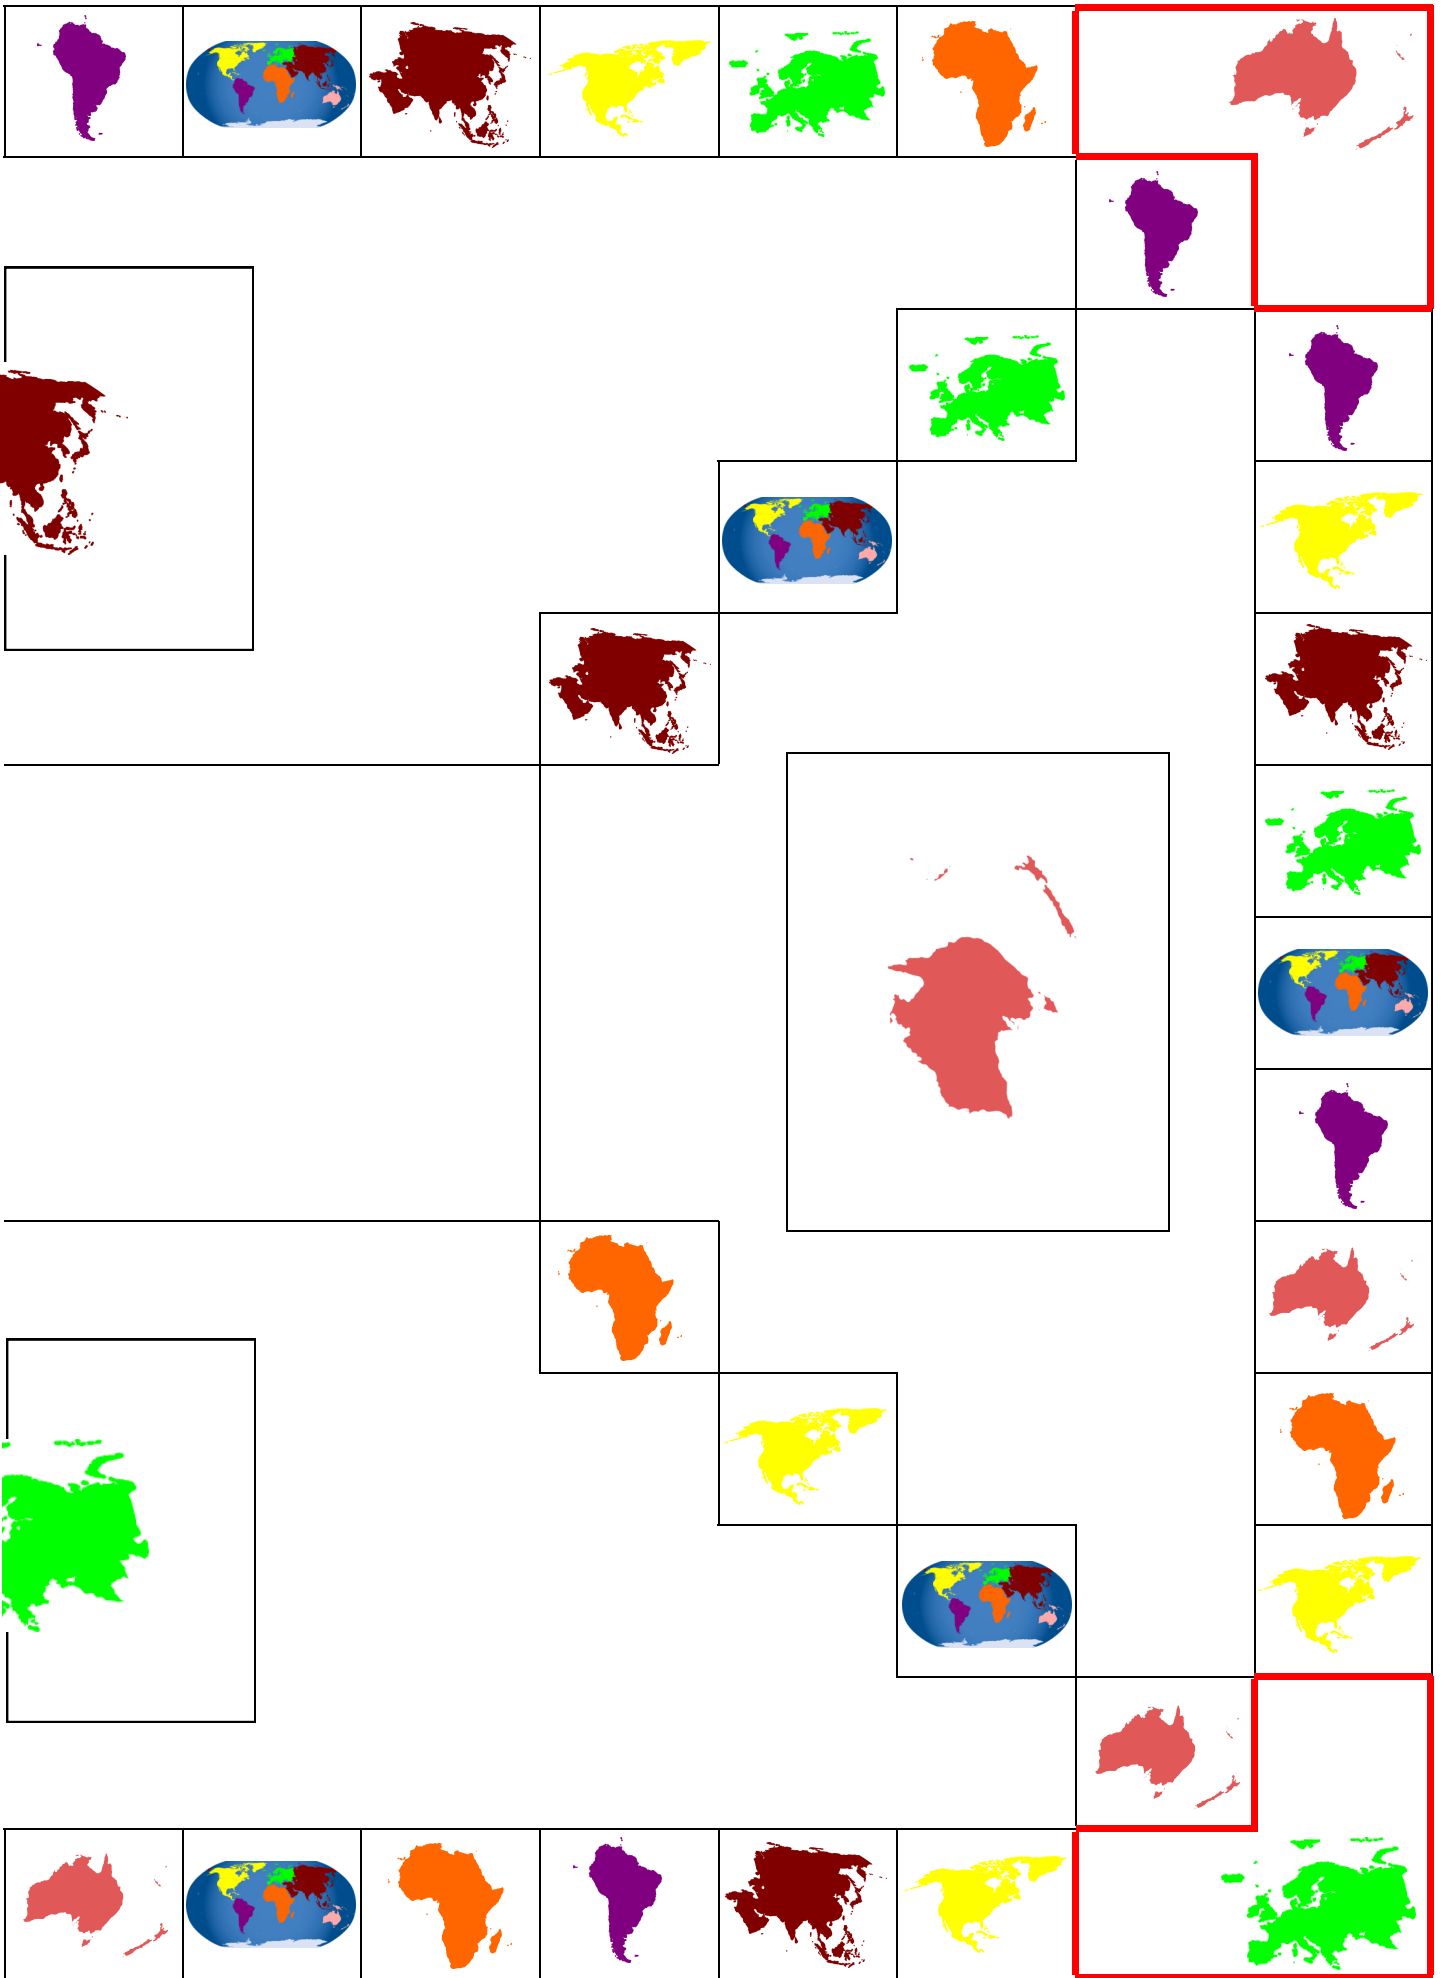

7. When a player lands on a special continent space outlined in red, and answers the question correctly, he may take a matching continent card. The player then moves back to the center section without rolling the dice, and waits for his next turn. When his next turn comes, he answers a "Go to" question and moves toward the continent as instructed if he answered correctly. It does not matter if he already has that continent card; he must move in that direction to the outer portion of the board where he can resume his journey to the next continent card he hopes to win. Each time a continent card is won, the player must move back to the center section and start the process again until one player has won all six continent cards.

If the player answers a question wrong while on a special continent space, he does not receive a continent card and must move one space away from the special continent space. On his next turn, he must answer a question correctly in order to roll and try again to land on a special continent space.

The first player to win all six continent cards is the winner!
