Audubon Birds Notebooking Journal

John James Audubon is known for his work in studying and cataloguing the birds of North America. From a young age, Audubon loved to draw birds. After several failed business attempts as an adult, he and his family moved to Louisiana, and he started painting pictures of birds in their natural habitats.

He created Birds of America, which included hundreds of color images of the birds he had studied. But no publisher in the United States would publish it. He took it to a British publisher, and the work became extremely famous.

This unit includes 28 of the birds Audubon studied. Some of their names have changed over the years, so you will have to do some research into which bird is represented by the picture in the research guide. Fortunately, much information about Audubon's work is available freely online.

The unit includes a notebooking page for each bird, a blank page for you to draw the bird, and a color picture in the reference guide. You will find the reference guide immediately following each set of pages for 4 birds.

Note: If you do not wish to print the color pictures and simply view them on the computer, do not print the following pages: 11, 20, 29, 38, 47, 56, and 65.

Have fun discovering the following birds in this unit:

American Goldfinch	Louisiana Waterthrush	Ruffed Grouse
American Redstart	Mockingbird	Snow Bird
