What do you think was the author's main reason for writing this book?

Do you think the author was fair in giving information both for and against their point of view? Give an example.

Check at least three facts the author gives in other resource books (encyclopedias, etc.) to see if the facts agree. Do you think, from the results of your search, that the author probably performed their research well? How does this make you feel about the accuracy of the information given by the author?

Is this book about a topic that will be relevant for a long period of time, or will it be quickly outdated? Why do you feel this way?

Was the information presented in a way that made it easy to understand and retain, or was it too technical? Give an example.

Does the book give any background to the information it contains. For example, if it is about a mechanical device, is there any history of the inventions that led up to it? Or, if it is about a new way of doing something, is there any background explaining previous ways of doing the same thing? Why might this be important?
