

A fawn's white spots help it blend into the grass and trees so predators can't see it easily. That's called camouflage!